

ANNA CASE, SOPRANO,
CREATES SENSATION"Made in America" Brands Artistry of Young Prima Donna Friday Night.

Miss Anna Case, lyric soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, created a sensation Friday night at the First Baptist church when presented by the Chattanooga Music club in a program distinctive for both rendition and selection. The large auditorium, formerly the Bijou theater, was completely filled. "any were expecting the treat in store for them; the majority were not, and the impression created by the young soprano, as a vision of pink loveliness, possessed by a sense of the seriousness of her art, is one not soon to be effaced. The patriotic fame of Miss Case heralded, a goodly sprinkling of army men was noted.

Everywhere Miss Case is regarded as a psychological study, whether singing before a chautauque audience of 4,000 or before the French commission on Fifth avenue, New York, or, last night, before her enthusiastic audience of Chattanooga music lovers.

Anna Case might be likened to a May morning with its crisp, dewy freshness, were it not for the touch of sadness in the flexible young voice and the choice of songs in which a tender minor is ever present. But Anna Case is American, first and last, born and educated in New Jersey, and both her personality and work are characterized by an attainment which has heralded her name from shore to shore.

Her Repertory.
There was nothing hackneyed in Miss Case's song program, builded as it was of the high-grade modern, mostly in English and French. The resonant powers of her voice made each syllable distinct, whether subdued or in the large fortissimo she so wonderfully commands.

But one operatic number, an aria from the "Maurice" of Gounod, appeared on the program, and in this, naturally, she attested the full scope of her lyric voice with its exploratory qualities. Her choicest artistry seemed reserved, however, for the rendition of the "Angelus," sung with an impressive religious feeling, and the two patriotic numbers, "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "The Star-Spangled Banner," given as encores, when her audience joined in the singing.

Two songs of India, "Hindu Slumber Song" and "Thy Hidden Gems are Rich Beyond All Measure"; a Scotch, "Pretty Cattle"; a Lithuanian song by Fr. Chopin, a Dutch song and the French suite gave the cosmopolitan touch now so necessary and acceptable on all musical programs.

Miss Case was free and gracious with her encores. Her accompanist, Charles Gibson Spross, being a composer of merit, one of his compositions, an exquisite bird song, was given, and in this artist and accompanist divided honors. Throughout the evening the well-played accompaniments, clear but never obtrusive, added much to the program.

During the singing Miss Case was presented with a large bouquet of pink carnations, the gift of the music club. An informal reception was held for the prima donna behind the scenes at the close of the program.

At intervals the vine is caught up to smaller pedestals. On the top of each of these is placed a basket of Easter lilies.

The bride will enter on the arm of her father, who will give her away. Miss Nancy White, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor. Lieut. Wiley Lee Crutcher, of Macon, will act as best man. Five attractive young girls chosen as bridesmaids are Miss Maude Ellis, Miss Jeannette Cowan, of Knoxville; Miss Gabrielle Bouscaren, of Cincinnati; and Miss Gloria Lamb. SINGER COMMENDS
COMMUNITY CHORUS
That a singer may achieve success in his or her art, conscientiously attained, without foreign study or travel, is evidenced in the phenomenal work of Miss Anna Case, lyric soprano, who was a Chattanooga attraction Friday. To a representative of "The Chattanooga News" Miss Case modestly told this fact in a brief interview.

lean singers, her entire career having been made in America.
"When one thinks it over, it is rather remarkable that this American girl, who only a very few years ago was a poor blacksmith's daughter in one of the tiny hamlets of New Jersey, should be selected to sing at this almost historical dinner and receive the plaudits of this assembly of the leaders in the present world crisis."

Referring to the singing of the chorus of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" by the large audience in unison with the songstress and of "Star-Spangled Banner," when Miss Case sustained the high notes of the song on the octave above, she said, "I knew Chattanooga had a community chorus. I could tell by the way the audience sang."

When told of the musical work of Geoffrey O'Hara during the past several months hereabouts she expressed pleasure and spoke in compliment, saying she knew him well.

Discussion was held concerning the playing of children upon the streets at night, and it was the unanimous opinion that playgrounds will solve the problem, provided that those living in contiguous property may be persuaded not to object to the noise.

Plans were discussed for bringing to the city a number of prominent speakers.

MISS HYDER EXPLAINS
STATUS OF DANCING PARTY

Miss Inez Hyder, whose dancing classes were to have held a children's party at the Hotel Patten Friday night, which event, as called off by Commissioner Huffaker, pursuant to the closing of children of all places of assembly during the present period, writes to The News the following letter, expressive of regret for the notoriety given the affair. Miss Hyder writes:

"I am feeling dreadfully over the notoriety my children's dance has received. It was no unusual event, just a meeting of my eight children's classes. In the ordinary course of events there would have been no mention of it at all, either before or after. There were no elaborate preparations, no costumes; the boys wearing their school uniforms and the girls

MRS. KELLOGG TELLS INTERESTING
STORY OF WAR CONDITIONS IN BELGIUM

"No human pen can describe the conditions in Belgium, even the brush and colors of an artist would fall short of picturing the intensely human strain," said Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, in an address at the First Baptist church Friday night.

Mrs. Kellogg is the only woman with the American relief commission under Herbert Hoover. She said it was a wonderful privilege to see what the American relief was doing in Belgium, and in explaining how she happened to be allowed to go over there she said it was because her husband was working for the women doing and sent for her to see conditions. Later he asked that she write a book about what these 9,000,000 French and Belgians were doing who have been cut off from the world by being inside of what is known as the "steel ring." This steel ring was described as a high wire fence charged with electricity, and part of Mrs. Kellogg's duty was to inspect the relief stations from the northern boundary, where Holland is shut off by this fence, to the southern boundary, where a continual bombardment is kept up.

Mrs. Kellogg was introduced by Prof. J. W. Abel, local food administrator, and proved a much younger looking woman than the audience, with the exception of a Mr. Young, who she had known in Rotterdam and who is now connected with the J. F. Lucey manufacturing plant, of this city, had expected to see.

In her address Mrs. Kellogg was careful to avoid the harrowing and gruesome and spoke of the courage the Belgian women were maintaining under the most strenuous circumstances. In the canteens, where children were fed, she said the women dressed in white, regardless of the fact that soap was very scarce in Belgium. They had red and white geraniums on the table.

She made no appeal for the food administration, but simply told conditions. In one canteen she told of hundreds of subnormal children, mainly affected with tuberculosis, getting one meal a day. She said Mr. Hoover had a great deal to do, but at her request one day he went to one of these places with her, and as they passed the courthouses there were 1,662 children singing, and they were singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." Upon seeing the women in white, with smiling faces and doing all they could to give relief and keep up courage, she said Mr. Hoover remarked: "In this room is the hope of Belgium."

She spoke of the soup line, where women served soup as fast as they possibly could to an emaciated crowd, yet one had to stand in line fifty minutes to get his allowance of one pint and 13 per cent. of them dropped because they hadn't the strength to stand.

In another class, she said, were professional men and women, doctors, lawyers and even members of the nobility who were too proud to go and ask for the soup and were actually starving to death; in fact, many people among this class had died of starvation.

But with starvation abroad in the land, she said, they were loyal to the advice given by their cardinals: Mercier to "bend their neck to the conqueror." Incredible as it might seem, she said, there is an element of cheer inside the "steel ring."

their usual party dresses. There was no punch to be served, no decoration of the ballroom. The only rehearsal was that of the grand march held in the ballroom yesterday afternoon.

"I was in every respect a 'war-time party.' I have the interest at heart of every one of these children and if I had thought the danger imminent I would have postponed the date myself, but I see no more danger of my children meeting together than in the school children's meeting daily in chapel or study hall.

"I have many pupils among the officers at the fort, and practically all of them asked me to see the children. But because the soldiers are blamed for much of the contagious disease now prevalent, I declined to ask any of them. The affair was purely for the pupils of my children's classes, and the guest list was limited to their parents."

"At Mr. Huffaker's and Dr. Knight's request I postponed the original date a week or ten days. I put it off to yesterday, the latest date possible for school children, before Lent, which begins the following Wednesday. This was announced in the papers, but not until late yesterday afternoon was I notified that there was no improvement in the health situation. Of course, I am disappointed. The children are impatient for the event to come and I to have it over, and to postpone it until after Easter seems an eternity to them. I still do not see any more danger to be encountered by the children than in the average day at school."

"INEZ HYDER."
The regular meeting of Chickamauga chapter, D. A. R., will be held Wednesday morning at 10:15 o'clock with Mrs. P. A. Brawner on Oak street. Misses Brawner and Brawner will be chosen for the continental congress and plans for a change in the by-laws of the order will be made.

Discussion will be held concerning the bringing of a prominent speaker to the city, who is known as the writer of the "Ideas of a Plain Country Woman," continued for several years through the Ladies' Home Journal.

The vesper service at the Y. W. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock will consist of oratorical songs. Mrs. F. B. Martin will preside and give the Scripture reading from the ninety-eighth Psalm. Mrs. W. H. Poling and Joseph Lo Buono will take part on the program.

WAR BOARD STILL MISSING

Washington, Feb. 9.—Officials of the American Electric Railway Association here are much perturbed over the disappearance of C. Louis Allen, of Syracuse, a millionaire member of the association's war board, who has not been seen nor heard from by his family or friends since a committee, on which he was serving, was abolished by the Council of National Defense, nearly a month ago.

As far as officials here know, Allen was last heard of in Baltimore early in January, when he was said to be on his way to Washington.
